Happy Mother's Day

She spends hours teaching them about God and how to be upright citizens. She has cooked literally thousand of meals. Her homemade pancakes, chocolate chip cookies, and brownies with icing are out of this world! (And her carrot cake and pecan pie are to die for!) She has washed a small mountain of laundry. She has figured out electronic "issues" with the DVD player and Wii, and is able to keep things running smoothly. She has put thousands of miles on the car taking kids here and there and visiting the elderly. She knows how to make four walls more than just a house-- she makes them a home. She spends time on her knees in the garden and occasionally enjoys pushing a lawnmower. She plays referee with kids on a daily basis and gives them valuable lessons.

She wipes away tears and loves to cuddle up with her babies on the couch. She has read a mountain of books to her children. She wipes away snot and has wiped four bottoms, and even cleaned up throw up when it made her gag. She serves as a family physician and applies band-aids with care. She studies the Bible with her children and teaches them to read. She dotes on her husband and fixes his favorite meal and desserts on a regular basis. She shows how to love. She occasionally hides chocolate. She loves road trips and has packed suitcases hundreds of times. She gets audio books for long-trips. She has sacrificed her husband more than anyone will ever know. She has whispered words of praise and words of constructive criticism. She has searched high and low for blankets and stuffed animals. She is a virtuous woman. And she deserves more than just one day!! She is a mom.
