Trying Times

In 1776, in a pamphlet that he titled Crisis, Thomas Paine wrote, “These are the times that try men’s souls.” Paine’s description was accurate. Those who opposed the English king and his invading army were severely tried, and in some cases killed. For example, Joseph Warren, an American patriot, courageously spoke out for freedom and was beheaded by British officers at Bunker Hill. The British officers presented Warren’s head as a gift to their commanding general.

No doubt, Bible students are reminded of John the Baptist, a far greater patriot who lost his head for courageously declaring the truth. John rebuked Herod for his adulterous marriage to Herodias (Matthew 14:4). Herodias, the wife that Herod had stolen from his brother Philip, did not appreciate John’s assessment. In fact, when the opportunity presented itself for her to get even with John, she wasted no time in doing so. Through her daughter, she requested the head of John the Baptist on a platter.

Today, times are beginning to surface that try men’s souls. Perhaps, not too far into the future, those who courageously speak out against homosexuality and other societal sins will suffer at the hands of an oppressive government. Will we have the courage of Joseph Warren or, better yet, the courage of John the Baptist? Will we stand strong like an oak, or will we be like a reed shaken with the wind? (cf. Luke 7:24).
